QUALITY, COST-EFFICIENCY, MINIMISING RISK

The challenges

HR departments in particular have faced greater and tougher challenges for some years now. Complex systems integration, digitisation projects and the current “war for talents” are now an unavoidable aspect of day-to-day operations. Payroll settlement has also become much more complex: for instance, with insurance and payroll questions about approaches to working from home at home and abroad, federalism in withholding tax accounting, such as the different handling of meal costs between cantons, annually changing calculation rules and adjustments to BVG benefits, etc., just to name a few more.

Accurate payroll and accounting now requires a great deal of expertise and specialisation. Unfortunately, this expertise is difficult to replace when people leave the personnel department. In addition, strategic HR issues are dealt with much later or not at all, as accurate payroll is the priority. This may result in a lack of transparency, complex auditing scenarios and employee dissatisfaction due to long processing times.

The solutions

Secure and flexible processes are required to ease the burden on personnel departments and assist with the digital transformation. Only by introducing efficient digital processes, a robust IT infrastructure for highly automated and standardised processes and using the right resources can the personnel department position itself as a business partner within the organisation and ensure transparency, security and a rapid response to current and future challenges.
